THE HERMAN CAIN SHOW: CLIMATE CHANGE - The Obama administration is working to forge a sweeping international climate change agreement to compel nations to cut their planet-warming fossil fuel emissions, but without ratification from Congress. In preparation for this agreement, to be signed at a United Nations summit meeting in 2015 in Paris, the negotiators are meeting with diplomats from other countries to broker a deal to commit some of the world's largest economies to enact laws to reduce their carbon pollution. But under the Constitution, a president may enter into a legally binding treaty only if it is approved by a two-thirds majority of the Senate. To sidestep that requirement, President Obama's climate negotiators are devising what they call a "politically binding" deal that would "name and shame" countries into cutting their emissions. The deal is likely to face strong objections from Republicans on Capitol Hill and from poor countries around the world, but negotiators say it may be the only realistic path.

This year's event will take place on Saturday, September 6, 2014 from 10am to 1pm at the Georgia International Convention Center. Labor of Love was created to reclaim some of the initial promise of Labor Day—a celebration of American labor and an inspiration that there is hope for American citizens. During the event, individuals will have access to job opportunities, they will also sharpen their job interviewing skills and job counselors will be on-site critiquing resumes. Americans are still suffering disproportionately in the current financial crisis, according to the Department of Labor's July report, unemployment still hovers around 6.2 percent nationally. In Georgia, the unemployment rate sits at 7.8 percent. Labor of Love was designed to meet the basic employment needs of so many. Individuals are welcome, but the goal is to improve the health of metro Atlanta's workforce. The majority of our participants are part of a corporate team, which builds camaraderie among coworkers and motivates them to get active. Unlike other races, The Kaiser Permanente Corporate Run/Walk has a built-in training component. This is not a one-day event—it's an 8-week fitness program that culminates in a 5K race in downtown Atlanta. This year also features the popular Saturday morning boot camp at Piedmont Park. Last year more than 17,000 runners and walkers from 400 metro Atlanta companies participated. PERSPECTIVES: Dorothy Styles, Project Grad and Sylvia Jones, Wells Fargo - College

With 27.2% of Georgia children living in poverty, going to college can seem more like a dream than a reality to many students. That's why Wells Fargo working with Project GRAD in Atlanta and First Generation Films teamed up to reach and inspire more than 2,000 high school students to screen the award-winning documentary First Generation at three high schools and Atlanta Metropolitan State College. A winner of awards at two film festivals, and filmed over the course of three years, First Generation (www.firstgenerationfilm.com) is narrated by Blair Underwood and profiles the emotional journey of four students attempting to break the cycle of poverty by pursuing their college dreams. The film painfully shows, first generation students are at a disadvantage due to their families' unfamiliarity with college applications, scholarships, and the federal aid process. In some Title I schools, guidance counselors are likely to oversee more than 600 students, leaving high performing first generation scholars with little support from their families or schools.

PERSPECTIVES: Bernard Kinsey – The Kinsey Collection

Have you ever wondered about the poor representation of African-Americans in the making of America? Bernard Kinsey calls it “the myth of absence.” To help deal with that, we are bringing to Atlanta for the first time The Kinsey Collection -- a myth-busting, dialogue-promoting show that will debut at the Atlanta History Center in early April. Bernard and Shirley Kinsey and their son Kahlil put it together and they’ll be in Atlanta to open the exhibit –which covers 400 years of art and artifacts that bring to life the real role of African-Americans in early – and later – America. It’s been to the Smithsonian and 14 other museums, and its’ been profiled on the CBS network and scores of articles and TV and radio stories – but it’s new to Atlanta. As an example, the collection includes chilling artifacts like female slave shackles, a wall graphic of the Goree Island (in Africa) portal to slave ships, a schedule of 500 slaves and an early book entitled “Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl.” And the early art works by African-Americans are amazing. There’s a copy of the Dred Scott decision, an early copy of the Emancipation Proclamation, Brown vs. Board of Education and much more. Bernard Kinsey, also shows that there were more two-headed African-American families in America in 1865 than there were white families – and that African-Americans were part of America before Jamestown – and not as slaves. And for the first time, this show will include a first edition of Solomon Northrup’s book “12 Years a Slave,” the basis for the film that just won Best Picture in the Oscars.

PERSPECTIVES: Tavis Smiley, Talk Host and Author of Death of a King

New York Times bestselling author and award-winning broadcaster Tavis Smiley brings us a revealing and dramatic chronicle of the twelve months leading up to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s assassination. Martin Luther King, Jr. died in one of the most shocking assassinations the world has known, but little is remembered about the life he led in his final year. Smiley recounts the final 365 days of King's life, revealing the minister's trials and tribulations—denunciations by the press, rejection from the president, dismissal by the country's black middle class and militants, assaults on his character, ideology, and political tactics, to name a few—all of which he had to rise above in order to lead and address the racism, poverty, and militarism that threatened to destroy our democracy.
